Not-so-ordinary holidays

<https://funfamilycrafts.com/special-days-and-holidays/>

Silvana Clark's book, Every Day a Holiday, includes food, craft, and fun ideas for the usual—and not so usual!—holidays throughout the year.

<https://www.amazon.com/Every-Day-Holiday-Celebrations-Whole/dp/0800758773>

Gloria Gaither and Shirley Dobson share ideas for building family traditions and togetherness in their Let's Make a Memory series

<http://store.gaither.com/MEMORYPK.item>

Celebrations of Faith – Instead of drawing upon calendar holidays, Randy and Lisa Wilson encourage you to celebrate the milestones in your own family. This creative resource shows parents how to implement simple, memorable ceremonies in their family for passing on the faith.

In Homespun Memories for the Heart, authors Karen Ehman, Kelly Hovermale, and Trish Smith share more than two hundred ideas for unforgettable family moments. These resources remind us to “celebrate ‘just because’ events like rainy days, road trips, bedtime, and book reading—because even ordinary moments are reason enough to celebrate.” (Ehman)

A Day of Delight: Making Sunday the Best Day of the Week

<http://www.doorposts.com/details.aspx?id=11>

A Night of Reformation: Celebrating the Reformation with Family and Friends. The Forsters have a long enjoyed our tradition of celebrating Reformation Night (October 31), an evening of games, music, and learning about Luther, Calvin, and other reformers (see a short video of their celebrations).

Holiday Devotionals/Bible Studies (Thanksgiving, Christmas, Easter) —Bible lessons and a craft for kids! Holidays always presented the same dilemma for Katherine and Cris Loop. How could they truly use them as a time to focus on the Lord instead of getting lost in all the worldly trappings? Their holiday Bible studies are designed to provide you with a fun and meaningful way to take advantage of the holidays to draw closer to the Lord. Each of the Bible studies comes as a set that includes an easy yet meaningful craft for children to complete as they listen. Little or no preparation needed for kits.

Organizing Your Units

Are you interested in documenting your holiday studies and adventures? Find activities, templates, worksheets, and other helps by searching online for holiday notebooking, lapbooking, or unit studies.

<https://homeschoolhelperonline.com/notebooking/holiday-notebooking-pages/>

Rachel Ramey's "Choosing Topics for a Unit Study" includes seven tips to plan a unit study.

Holiday-of-the-Month Club

Want to give your kids a gift that says, "You're special and I want you to celebrate life!" all throughout the year? Create your own holiday-of-the-month club. Using an idea-packed resource such as Silvana Clark's Every Day a Holiday or one of the others listed, select a holiday (or two or three) from each month and make holiday activity bags. To help them anticipate the learning fun, mark the dates on a calendar with stars—but don't give away the surprise. (Site below shows how Vicki put hers together.)
