

A few resources for you from Vicki Bentley's recordkeeping session:

What Records Should You Keep? Includes lists of essential, good-to-have, and for-your-reference options you may wish to include in your homeschool records. Also includes links at the end to various online, computer-based, or paper recordkeeping helps.

Vicki's notes from the 3-hour version of High School 101: Blueprint for Success ($6.50). This pdf download saves you hours of note-taking during the session, so you can concentrate on the information and on your mentor's discussion points. (Full book to be released soon!)

HEAV Transcript Service This helpful service (which Vicki used for her final records for her children to file for later) walks you through the GPA calculation, course title suggestions, and more, giving you a professional document for college and employer use, as well as future reference.

Transcript review service provided by a seasoned former HSLDA high school consultant

Frequently Asked Questions about transcripts HEAV has provided answers to some of the most commonly asked questions about transcripts and high school records.

I Hated Homeschooling Not all teens are thrilled with the family's decision to homeschool. Maybe you have a kiddo who isn't totally "on board"? Be encouraged by this grad's article!

Making the Most of the Middle School Years It is not uncommon for parents to second-guess themselves all over again as their children approach the early teen years and the parents feel inadequate to prepare their children for high school.

5 Tips for Finishing Your School Year Strong Whether you're raring to go for another few months, or you are dragging to that end-of-year finish line, here are a few tips to help you confidently close out this year's adventures.

Tips for course descriptions from Ann at It's Not That Hard to Homeschool

A Day in Our Homeschool When I began homeschooling, I read about how a variety of families approached homeschooling, and one of the most freeing and encouraging revelations to was that there's not one right way to do this!

HEAV and HSLDA both have loads of great resources for you on your journey. I encourage you to follow their sites and Facebook pages! (And of course, Everyday Homemaking and Everyday Homeschooling!)
